Newest Audio Products Manufacturer; Destination Audio, Starts Shipping Products

LAYTON, UTAH — JANUARY 9, 2006 — Destination Audio, a manufacturer of home audio products, announced today that they will begin shipping their line of audio products in February of 2006.

Based in Layton Utah, Destination Audio is offering a full line of distributed audio, outdoor audio and home theater products. Working with veteran product engineers and designers, Destination Audio manufactures in-wall, in-ceiling, and freestanding speakers; along with their associated electronics. These products will be sold through security, low voltage and audio/video distributors.

“Most of the audio products being sold through distribution today seem to fit one of two categories” says Gary Tanner, General Manager of Destination Audio. “The first group is audio products from companies who sell their product directly to dealers as well as distribution. This presents some challenges for both their direct dealer accounts and their distributors. The second is audio products offered by companies whose core focus products are video, security or structured wiring. All too often the audio products from these companies lack the depth and features needed. Destination Audio’s core focus is Audio. We design and manufacture high quality, cost effective audio products that are not sold to end users, but offered to the trades through distribution”.

Destination Audio's initial product offering will launch in February of 2006, with additional product releases scheduled through out the year.

"The name Destination Audio is new to the industry", says Roger Hassing, CFO of Destination Audio. "But the resources that Destination Audio has used to design and manufacturer their products are well tested and proven. The R&D team has over thirty years experience in designing world class speakers and the management team consists of industry veterans".
